Hints and Tips Unit 2

The information in this guide will be helpful to you when you are ready to complete your assessment:

Unit 2: Workplace communication

8000-265 Workplace Communication

8000-274 Methods of Communicating in the Workplace

8000-263 Communicating with People Outside the Work Team

Section 1 – Understand the importance of effective communication and methods of communication

Q1. Explain why clear and effective communication is essential in the workplace

To describe, ensure that you say why clear and effective communication is essential. Think about its importance, what does it look like, how it might be delivered and the result if communication is not clear and effective.

Q2. Outline the key stages in the communication process

An outline is a small description, so here ensure that you name the key stages and provide information for each one. You might include its purpose and how it's delivered.

Q3. List potential barriers to communication and outline how these could be overcome

You must name at least 2 different barriers to communication and provide a short description for how each one could be overcome.

Q4. Explain methods of communication and their best use when communicating with the team:

You must provide at least 2 different methods of communication. Make the distinction clear e.g. use different paragraphs for each one. Within your explanation, think about how and when each one is used, when it works well and the outcome for when it doesn't work well.

Section 2 – Understand the importance of maintaining accurate records of communication

Q1. Explain why it is important to have a record of communication

There are many reasons for why it's important to have a record of communication. Your answer should include as many of these as you can. Ensure that, as an explain answer, you provide detail for each reason given. Think about, why each is necessary, how it supports the communication process, what happens if this method isn't used?

Q2. Outline the importance of keeping a record of oral communication

An outline should be a brief description or a short paragraph. What's the purpose of recording oral communication, who/how does it help. What might be the consequences of not keeping a record?

Q3. Describe methods of maintaining accurate records of electronic and oral communication

You must include at least 2 different methods of maintaining accurate records. Be sure to include both electronic and oral communications in your answer. You could provide examples for each such as when each is used and how the records are maintained.

Section 3 - Understand the importance of effective communication and methods in the workplace

Q1. Explain the importance of effective communication in the workplace

For an explanation ensure that you include why effective communication is important, what are the benefits, how is it displayed and what the consequences are if it's not carried out effectively.

Q2. Outline the possible impacts of poor communication in the workplace

You must provide at least 2 possible impacts of poor communication. You could choose particular types of communication e.g. written and oral with examples of what happens when these are not done well.

Q3. Identify methods to communicate in the workplace

You must state at least 2 different methods of communication and provide a sentence or two to briefly describe each one.

Q4. List the advantages and disadvantages of identified communication methods and their best use

Using the methods identified in Q3, you should now list the advantages and disadvantages for each one. Remember to add in when each one is best used and the reason for this.

Q5. Identify barriers to communication and explain how these could be overcome

You must provide at least 2 different barriers to communication. You must also provide an explanation for each one for how they could be overcome. You could provide examples of each barrier and how you think they could be overcome, or if from a real work example how it was resolved.

Q6. Identify the positive benefits of effective communication

You must state at least 2 positive benefits and include a brief description each one that gives some detail for its effectiveness.

Section 4 - Understand the importance of effective communication with people outside the team

Q1. Explain why effective communication with those outside the team is important

For an explain answer you must provide detail as to why the communication is important, what are the benefits of effective communication and what are the consequences. You must make referent to those outside of the team and consider if there is a difference to communicating with those inside the team.

Q2. Give examples of the methods of communicating with those outside of team

You must provide examples of at least 2 different methods. For each one, you could include why the method is most suitable, was it chosen for a particular reason e.g. for a particularly group or situation?

Q3. List the advantages and disadvantages of each method

For the methods provided in Q2, you will now need to list the advantages and disadvantages. Try and include a little detail to each one to demonstrate understand of what you've listed.

Section 5 - Understand how to present a positive impression to those outside the team

Q1. Outline why it is important to give a positive impression to internal and external customers

This is a brief description, therefore a short paragraph is expected. You must include the importance of giving a positive impression and reference this to both internal and external customers. Is there a difference in giving an impression to each?

Q2. Explain why product/service knowledge is important in presenting a positive impression to those outside the team

Here you could think of a time when you've had good/bad experience of receiving product service/knowledge. What happens when you receive good product service? How does the person outside of the team feel about that team/organisation? Also consider the negative reactions and what impact poor product/service knowledge has. How does it affect the image of the team/person providing the service?

Q3. Explain why it is important to observe legal, organisational and ethical rules when providing information to customers

Within your explanation, refer to each category: legal, organisational and ethical rules. Think about what's different to each one and why they are all important in their own right. Do you have any examples of when these haven't been followed and the consequences? Are there any organisations that you think follow these well and what does that mean for the organisation.

Q4. Outline communication skills that could improve the relationship with customers

You will need to include at least 2 different communication skills and briefly describe how they could improve the relationships with customers. Think about, what difference their use makes to the customer and the reason for this.
