Name: Bill McKenzie

Task: To create a double-sided A4 size information sheet for an exhibition. The information sheet will be printed out to give to potential customers at the exhibition.

Deadline: 4th May 2020

Date of review against the original plan: 11th May 2020

Key outcomes / requirements:

- To create a double-sided A4 size information sheet, to include details of the hotel facilities, upcoming special offers, pictures of guest rooms and contact information.
- To have 1,000 copies of the information sheet printed no later than 4th May.

Were the outcomes achieved?

I successfully created my information sheet and provided 1,000 copies to the Sales Team in time for the exhibition. After the exhibition, I received feedback from the Sales Team to say that the information sheet was very effective. It looked very professional on the exhibition stand and it had all of the details they needed to give to potential customers.

What went better than planned? / What did not go as planned?

The research I carried out in order to gather the information I needed was done very well. It was quick and easy to collect the hotel details, special offer information and contact details to include in the information sheet. The Sales Team were very responsive in providing me with the details I needed from them.

For the pictures of the guest rooms, I needed some help from the Technical Team. When I contacted them, they were in the middle of a big project and couldn't help me out straight away. This meant I had to wait longer for the images and it made things a bit tight hitting my deadline for getting everything printed off. If I had known in advance about the workload of the Technical Team, I would have been able to give them more notice and maybe had my images ready sooner.

Another problem I had was a delay in the delivery of printer ink. I did order it well in advance but a problem at the stationery company meant that delivery was delayed by 2 days. This didn't stop me from having everything ready in time, but it did mean that I had to work late one night to set the printer up and print my information sheets.

How effective were the IT tools used?

Microsoft Word was definitely the right software to use for this task. I was able to split the content into two columns (in line with the company guidelines for layout) and it was easy to format the sheet as I wanted to.

I was able to use the spell checking tool in Word to make sure my work was accurate and the 'print preview' feature allowed me to check that the layout / format of the document was the right quality before I printed it.

What were the strengths and weaknesses?

The main strengths in this task were:

- My Microsoft Word skills. I have lots of experience using Word and this made it very easy for me to create the information sheet using the relevant software tools.
- The company guidelines were very useful to help me make sure that the information sheet was accurate, fit for purpose and consistent with the company brand.
- Receiving such positive feedback from the Sales Team after the exhibition. This showed me that I had completed the task well and achieved the outcomes.

The main weaknesses in this task were:

- Unforeseen delays due to other projects (internally) and delivery problems (at the stationery company).

Are there any improvements to make next time?

For any information / help I need from other people, I will ask for this as soon as possible to allow for any conflict with other projects they might be working on.

I would also like to spend time learning more about how to use imaging software, so that I can create my own image files next time. When the Technical Team showed me what they would do to format the images, it seemed quite simple to do. So, it would be good if I could do this myself and not have to ask for help with this part of the task
