Hints and Tips Unit 6

The information in this guide will be helpful to you when you are ready to complete your assessment:

Unit 6: Innovation and Change in an Organisation

8000-301 Understanding innovation and change in an organisation

Section 1: Understand innovation and change in an organisation

Q1. Explain the benefits of innovation and change for the organisation

You will need to include two different benefits within your answer. Make sure that you explain – don't just describe the benefits. Include why they're good and the consequences of not introducing innovation and change for the organisation.

Q2. Identify the barriers to change and innovation in the organisation

You must include at least two barriers, but should try to give more. Include a short description for what the barriers are and how they prevent change and innovation.

Q3. Explain practical ways of overcoming these barriers

Refer to the barriers that you provided in Q2 and add a detailed explanation for how they can be overcome. Think about the steps that can be taken and what effect this will have on the organisation.

Section 2: Understand how to plan, monitor and review the implementation and communication of innovation and change in an organisation

Q1. Describe which planning, monitoring and review techniques could be used to manage innovation and change

You will need to include at least two different techniques in your answer. Try and distinguish between the techniques and include their main features.

Q2. Explain why communication is important in successful implementation of innovation and change

To offer this explanation, think about what makes communication important when implementing innovation and change. You could also consider the consequences of not communicating well and how it affects the organisation and/or employees.

Section 3: Understand the effects of innovation and change on people and teams in an organisation

Q1. Explain possible human effects of innovation and change upon people and teams in an organisation

Include two or more effects within your answer. Think about why they affect people the way that they do and is there anything that could be differently, or anything else that could be done. You could also consider how people would feel if innovation and change never occurred.
