Hints and Tips Unit 1

The information in this guide will be helpful to you when you are ready to complete your assessment:

Unit 1: Developing and Understanding the work team

8000-253 Developing the work team

8000-276 Understanding effective teamworking

Section 1 – Understanding the nature of teams

Q1. Explain how teams differ from groups in the workplace

Think about the characteristics of groups and teams in the workplace, what is the difference between the two. What do teams work towards that is different from groups?

Q2. Describe the behavioural characteristics of an effective team

Think about the different characteristics that the team will need to make it effective. Why do these characteristics make the team effective? What benefits do they have?

Q3. Outline the stages of team development using a recognised model

In the course materials you learnt about the Tuckman model for team development. You could use this, or you may want to research other models, and give an outline of each of the different stages of development. What effect does each stage have on the teams work as they progress? You could give an example from you own work experience.

Section 2 – Understand the advantages and disadvantages of team working

Q1. Identify the responsibilities of team members

This is an identify question so you may just list the responsibilities of team members, but it would be better if you consider the benefits of team members taking on responsibilities and the impact of giving responsibilities to team members. You may have experience of this from your own work which you could give an example of.

Q2. List the advantages of working in a team:

Think about why team work can be more effective than just working in groups or alone. While this question is only asking for a list of advantages you may want to describe the benefits that this has to the individual, the team and the organisation. You may also have experience from your own workplace that you could give an example of.

Q3. List the disadvantages of working in a team

Think about situations or tasks where it may be more advantageous for the work to be completed by an individual or a group rather than a team. You may have experience from your own workplace that you could give an example of.

Section 3 - Understanding effective team working

Q1. Identify the characteristics of an effective team and the advantages of working in a team

While this question is only asking you to identify the characteristics and advantages try and expand by giving as wide a range of characteristics and advantages as you can along with a description of why they make the team effective. You may also want to make reference to a relevant model such as Tuckman or Belbin

Q2. Identify possible barriers to effective team working

As well as just listing the possible barriers try and expand on each one by describing why it is a barrier, you may also have experience from your own workplace that you could give as an example.

Q3. Outline the possible effects of identified barriers on the team

Thinking about the barriers you identified for Q2, how might these affect the team? Think about the effectiveness of the overall team, the impact it can have on individuals and performance. Consider the cause and effect of each barrier identified.

Q4. Explain how to create and maintain an effective team

Think about the various factors that can be utilised to create and maintain an effective team. You may find it helpful to reference an appropriate model such as Tuckman or Belbin within your response.
