Introduction

Budgets are essential to an organisation when it comes to managing and controlling financial resources in order to achieve organisational objectives.

A budget may be used in many ways and for several purposes. Some of the key purposes include:

- Making financial decisions
- Managing organisational objectives
- Thinking about the effective use of resources that are available
- Collecting information on estimated and actual performance
- Using this information to make informed decisions in future business planning.

A brief introduction explaining the importance of budgeting to the organisation.

A timetable explaining when the master budget will be compiled from the other budgets.

Guidelines for the key assumptions (to be used by managers in their budgets).

Guidelines

A budget needs to make assumptions about how internal and external business conditions will develop and change. Natus aut aut quiat est res ma prorepti odit eost percitibus ra diam faccae velit, cum derit ea dolor re, cumquias aborem vororibus de aut illab iumque.

Managers use sensitivity analysis to review different scenarios. They ask questions and consider the impacts of various alternatives (the "what-ifs"). For example.

1. The economic outlook - Natus aut aut quiat est res ma prorepti odit eost percitibus ra diam faccae velit, cum derit ea dolor re, cumquias aborem vororibus de aut illab iumque porerrum suntia vororio bearum quunti re ped et que possi desed minullo rporepera voloescium fuga.
